CARDOZO SCHOOL OF LAW
NEW YORK, NEW YORK

ADMINISTRATION

YESHIVA UNIVERSITY

500 WEST 185TH STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y. 10033

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

TO THE CARDOZO CLASS OF 1985:

The challenges that confront you now as you prepare to enter the field of law are more diverse and more complex than those that faced your predecessors.

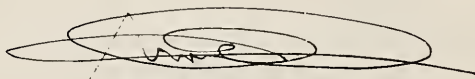

The world today is a smaller place than it once was and, as recent events indicate, courtrooms -- American courtrooms in particular -- increasingly serve as international arenas for the resolution of a variety of perplexing problems. Technology has firmly embedded itself in the fabric of our lives, leaving a myriad of unresolved questions in every area from medical care delivery to corporate operations and civil liberties.

Developments such as these broaden the lawyer's traditional role as a seeker of justice and a defender of the weak -- certainly more than that of a paid advocate or legal counselor.

A little under ten years ago, we founded Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law to provide a comprehensive legal education that would help meet these new challenges to the profession while continuing to provide fresh approaches to the old ones. Cardozo School of Law has succeeded in its goal by providing an outstanding, dynamic faculty and innovative programs within the traditional framework of a quality legal education.

I have every confidence that it is you, students of the class of '85, who will truly make their marks on the legal profession. Cardozo School of Law was founded on the pursuit of excellence, it thrives on the attainment of excellence, and you are an enduring symbol of that excellence.

As you enter this ancient profession, I am certain that you will remember Yeshiva University and help further its mission by advancing the welfare of all humankind.

Adjunct Professor of Law. B.A., 1960, LL.B., 1963, Yale University. Professor Weiss has been director of legal services for the elderly poor in New York City since 1969. Prior to that he served as managing attorney at two legal services offices and as an attorney at the Center on Social Policy and Law at Columbia University. Professor Weiss is an honors graduate of Yale College, was elected to the Law Review at Yale Law School, and spent a year as a Fulbright Scholar in Italy. He has served as a consultant to numerous public interest and government organizations, including the Office of Economic Opportunity, National Institute for Mental Health of Children, and President's Commission on Civil Disorders. Professor Weiss has appeared as a guest speaker at many educational institutions and professional organizations, and on several radio and television programs.

COURTHOUSES

One architecture critic has written that the reason for the long flight of stairs is to allow the ground floor to be set aside for deliveries. Lawyers may think the idea was to strengthen shaky knees, or to provide exercise.

Stained glass at Jefferson Market Courthouse (now a branch of the New York Public Library).

Two views of the Bronx County Courthouse.

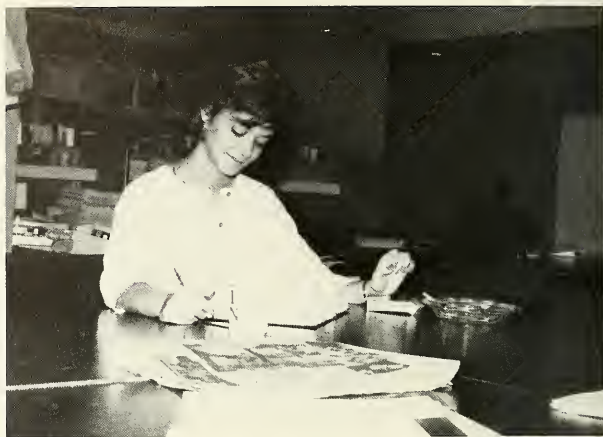

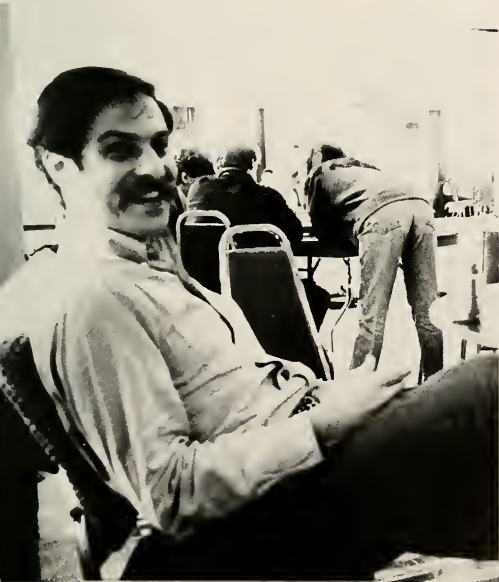

Courthouse of the Second Department in Brooklyn Heights where "Court Street lawyers" bring their cases - or defend them - on appeal.

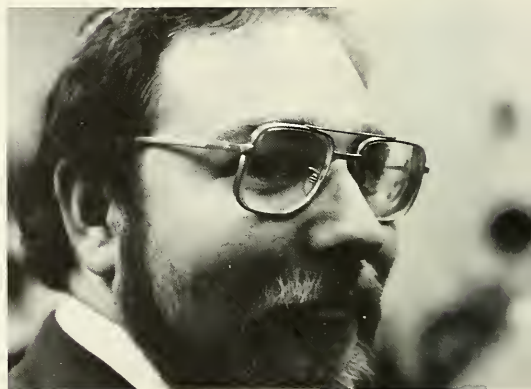

Bronx Criminal Court, where several graduates of the Class of '85 are already bringing Perpetrators to account - or at least to a mutually advantageous plea bargain.

Cardozo 3L's are anything but jaded. By the same token, our professors may be eccentric, demanding, ironic, or all of those things - but few seem to be bored.

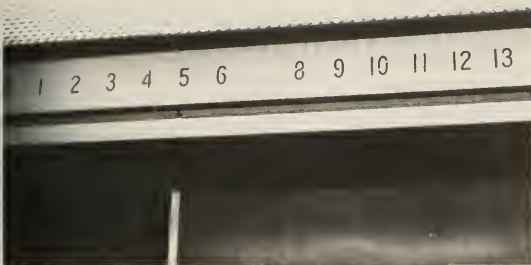

"The library - you know, up on the seventh floor - it's a great place. When I go there I always find the book I want. It hasn't been taken out; and when I open it, the binding goes CRACK! Never been opened before."

-Professor Lushing during a class in Criminal Procedure

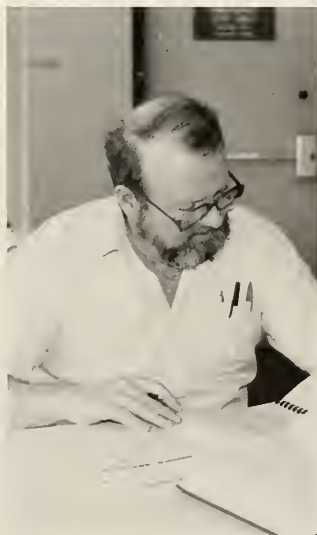

Students waiting for elevators to library.

Sometimes by the time we left it would be quite dark, or we would be seeing double.

THE LAW IN LITERATURE LITERATURE IN THE LAW SERVICE OF PROCESS FROM HERMAN MELVILLE'S "COCK-A-DOODLE-DOO!"

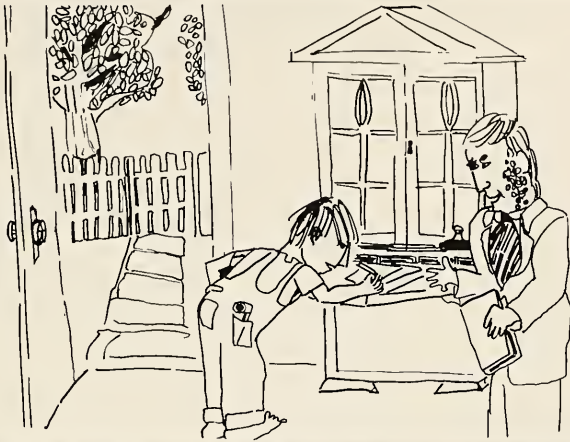

At last, after some weeks I was necessitated to clap another mortgage on my estate in order to pay certain debts, and among others the one I owed the dun, who of late had commenced a civil-process against me. The way the process was served was a most insulting one. In a private room I had been enjoying myself in the village tavern over a bottle of Philadelphia porter, and some Herkimer cheese, and a roll, and having apprised the landlord, who was a friend of mine, that I would settle with him when I received my next remittances, stepped to the peg where I had hung my hat in the bar-room, to get a choice cigar I had left in the hall, when lo! I found the civil-process enveloping the cigar. When I unrolled the cigar, I unrolled the civil-process, and the constable standing by rolled out, with a thick tongue, "Take notice!" and added, in a whisper, "Put that in your pipe and smoke it!"

I turned short round upon the gentlemen then and there present in that bar-room. Said I, "Gentlemen, is this an honourable-nay, is this a lawful way of serving a civil-process? Behold!"

One and all they were of opinion that it was a highly inelegant act in the constable to take advantage of a gentleman's lunching on cheese and porter, to be so uncivil as to slip a civil-process into his hat. It was ungenerous; it was cruel; for the sudden shock of the thing coming instant upon the lunch would impair the proper digestion of the cheese, which is proverbially not so easy of digestion as blanc-mange.

CONTRACT FORMATION IN TWAIN'S HUCKLEBERRY FINN

"Why, my boy, you are all out of breath. Did you come for your interest?"

"No, sir," I says; "is there some for me?"

"Oh, yes, a half-yearly is in last night—over a hundred and fifty dollars. Quite a fortune for you. You had better let me invest it along with your six thousand, because if you take it you'll spend it."

"No, sir," I says, "I don't want to spend it. I don't want it at all—nor the six thousand, nuther. I want you to take it; I want to give it to you—the six thousand and all."

He looked surprised. He couldn't seem to make it out. He says:

"Why, what can you mean, my boy?"

I says, "Don't you ask me no questions about it, please. You'll take it—won't you?"

He says:

"Well, I'm puzzled. Is something the matter?"

"Please take it," says I, "and don't ask me nothing—then I won't have to tell no lies."

He studied awhile, and then he says:

"Oho-o! I think I see. You want to sell all your property to me—not give it. That's the correct idea."

Then he wrote something on a paper and read it over, and says:

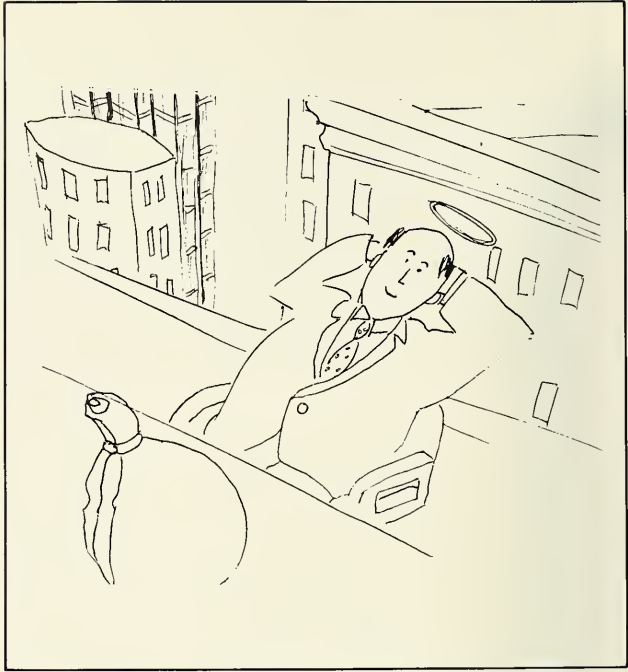

"There; you see it says 'for a consideration.' That means I have bought it of you and paid you for it. Here's a dollar for you. Now you sign it."

So I signed it, and left.

Francis v. United Jersey Bank

87 N.J. 15 (Supreme Court of New Jersey, 1981)

New Jersey's highest court affirms a judgment in the amount of $10,355,736.91. Most of that amount represented improper payments made by a reinsurance company to certain relatives of chief stockholders and officers. One defendant died before trial; her estate was represented by an executrix named Lillian P. Overcash. The opinion states with apparent irony: "The reinsurance business was described by an expert at trial as having 'a magic aura around it of dignity and quality and integrity.'"

Reste Realty Corporation v. Cooper

53 N.J. 44 (Supreme Court of New Jersey, 1969)

"Whenever it rained during the first year of defendant's occupancy water ran off the driveway and into the office and meeting rooms

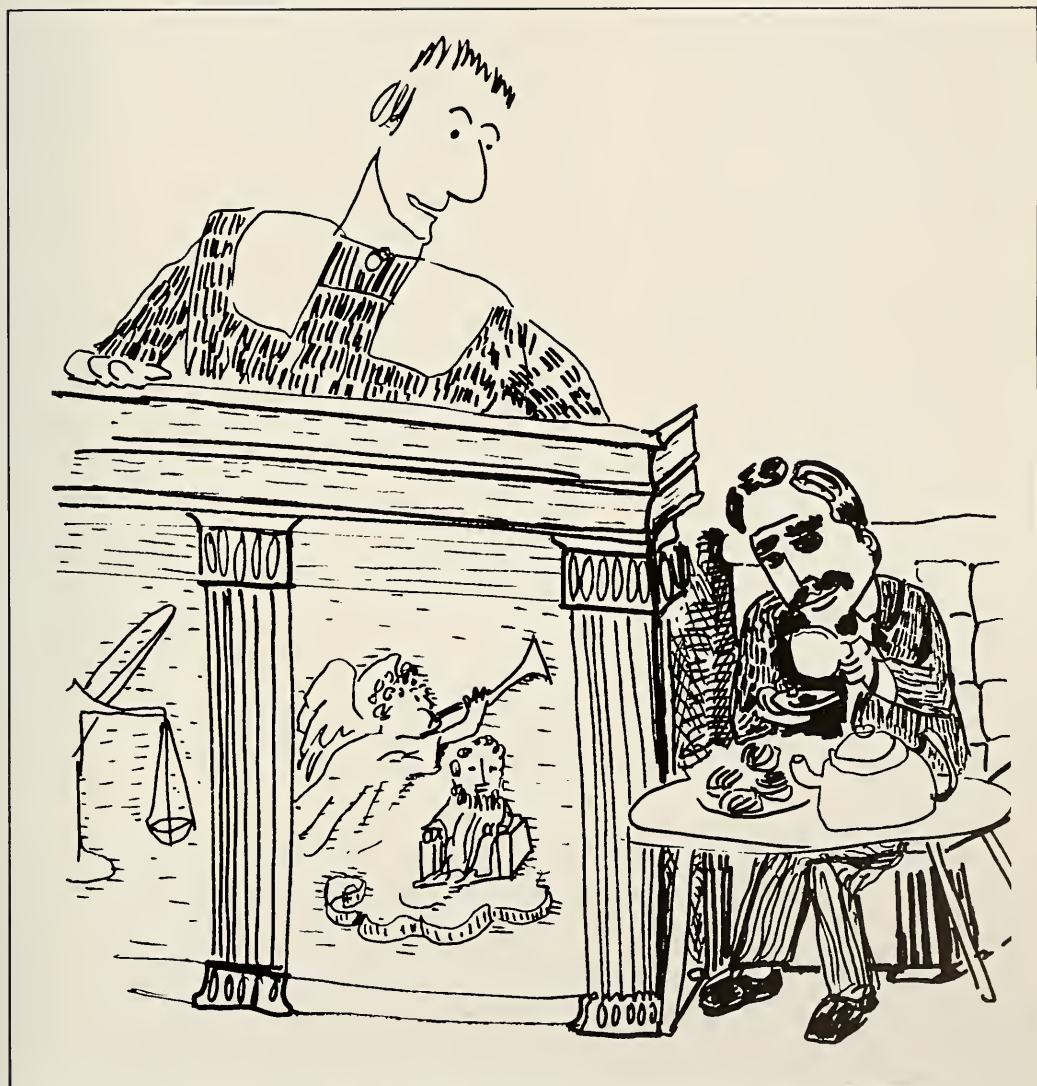

"Arthur A. Donigian, a member of the bar of this state, had his office in the building. Whenever water came into the leased floor, defendant would notify him and he would take steps immediately to remove it

"Repairs were done as promised and although the record is not entirely clear, apparently the seepage was somewhat improved for a time. Subsequently it worsened, but Donigian responded immediately to each complaint and removed the water from the floor."

Regarding which facts our property professor remarked, "There may be a lesson here for us."

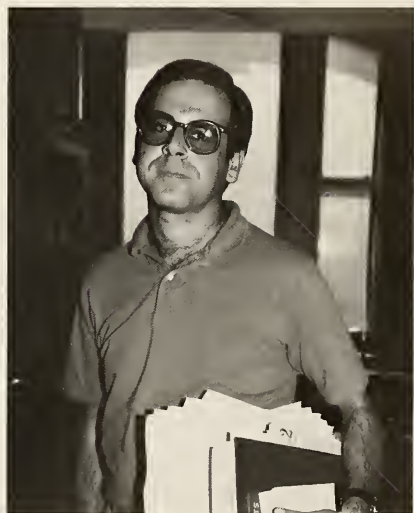

"Tell him I'm at a closing."

"Well, does that refresh your recollection, Monsieur Proust?"

Now...on to bigger and better things!

Westchester Spotlight magazine began publishing eight years ago with one magazine, Spotlight on Rye. Since then, it has developed into ten separate community magazines: Rye; Harrison/Purchase; Mamaroneck/Larchmont; New Rochelle/Pelham; Scarsdale; White Plains; Northern Westchester; The Hudson River Towns; Bronxville, Eastchester, Tuckahoe and Mount Vernon; and Port Chester/Rye Brook and Greenwich. One hundred thousand readers from all parts of Westchester and Fairfield enjoy the Spotlight family of magazines. The ninety-six page, four-color publication is the primary source for local information of restaurants, people, places and events.

For further information about the magazine, please call (914) 967-8619 or write to: 18-20 Purdy Avenue, Rye, New York 10580.
